Help them understand that violence is never an answer. Teach them to build bridges, not walls. Teach them to love and respect every single person. And above all, keep up the laser focus on developing their skills to acknowledge and manage feelings and use communication, compassion and curiosity to work through adversity.

We know this what you all do every day in your programs. That knowledge is one of the few things that gives us encouragement on days like this. Your servant leadership to the children you work with and for gives us hope for a much brighter future than we have today.

Sincerely,

The Team at NAA
